

IN MEMORY OF ELISE BOULDING: Some Final Thoughts

Sam: Elise Boulding – who was she?

Kris: I dunno. Not all of the people shaping history become famous.

Tim: I think she was a voice for peace at a time when much of the world was at war.

Kris: . . . she was some kind of peace activist, right?

Tim: Yeah, her thoughts are relevant today because we need to cultivate cultures of peace instead of societies that glorify war.

Ted: Many men seem to think of war as if it were an exciting game.

Terri: Well, if you're military industrialist raking in billions of dollars from blood, perhaps it is. However, if you are a refugee in a conflict zone then your entire perspective would be different.

- T Newfields

Begin: 2003 in Nagoya ≡ Finished: 2020 in Yokohama

