

An-Yi: (cynically) Not much has changed . . . modern medical science is often preoccupied with money-making. That's not unlike the snake-oil charlatans of yesteryear.

Daiki: (nodding) Yeah, now all witch-doctors have university degrees.

Chariya: It's easy to be cynical, but some spiritual healers are bona fide. They simply work on levels most folks don't fathom.

Bhāraté: Perhaps so. Our understanding of health is still primitive.

- T Newfields

Beg.: 2005 in Tokyo △ Fin.: 2019 in Yokohama

