

PROLOGUE

Bill: Have you read this Cyberpoem thing?

Liao: (raising an eyebrow) Should I?

Bill: Well, I dig it!

Gus: It might be a fun way to pass the time. Not many customers are coming here.

Nadya: Hmm. If we start talking about poetry, it might freak out potential customers.

Liao: When no customers are around, let's talk about anything we want. However, if customers are within earshot, we should discuss company products.

Bill: (nodding) Seems fair enough to me.

Nadya: Yeah, I'd rather talk about poetry than merely pretend to be busy. Look at this trade show – it is an awesome joke?! So many people are pretending!

Liao: Relax. What seems like pretense or jest is most often unsure people attempting to do their best.

- T Newfields [Nitta Hirou / Huáng Yuèwǔ]

Begun: 2016 in Xin-Táiběi, Taiwan / Finished: 2017 in Yokohama, Japan

Creative Commons License: Attribution. {{CC-BY-4.0}}

