

DREAM BLOSSOMS: Some thoughts about cognitive bias

Miok: (gazing at an image) Some people see flowers. However, gazing at the same object, others see mere weeds . . .

Tim: That's the power of creative framing – it enables us to recast things in new ways.

Chris: (grumbling, in a bad mood) Huh? What err you yelping about?

Miok: (facetiously). . . Haven't you decided already?

Tim: Indeed. Often we decide things with knowing almost nothing about them.