

Lit-A-Rupture: A Post Literary Construction

TEXT TRANSFORMATION:

Some Thoughts on Life Scripting the hands of countless artists create each of us gradually o'er time we begin as empty canvases in a universe with few visible lines gradually we gain texture as events rub deep into our lives sometimes we create beautiful patterns with materials that appear other times we get frustrated succumbing to despair or fear to be an artist requires boldness and intention to transform mediocrity.

it also requires a sense of humor and tolerance for absurdity

Ella: Do we script our lives or are we scripted by events around us?

Shu: ... perhaps both.

Juanita: The boundary between "self" and "other" seems very fluid.

Jack: ... and human lives are so brief.

- T Newfields

Begun: 1970 in Newtown, PA / Finished: 2020 in Shizuoka, Japan

