

FROM THE KILN: An Examination of Desire

clay of desire
fire of lust
mud of contagion
burning fine dust
heat of passion
power of flame
shaping dull objects
transforming their grain
out with all water
bake til red
search for cracks
cool slowly
find beauty
add liquid:
ceramic heart
empty head

Don: When you examine desire closely it often seems absurd.

Cindy: All beautiful things begin to appear illogical upon close examination.

Aiko: Agreed. It seems the intellect has its place, but it's not the only way to experience the world.

- T Newfields

Begun: 1996 in Shizuoka, Japan \triangle Finished: 2019 in Yokohama, Japan

