

NATURAL LANGUAGE PROCESSING:

Some Thoughts about Linguistic Parsing

Melissa: Is this the way you process language?

Tim: No, but it looks like a good way to process bologna.

Liao: Well, maybe language is like bologna in many regards: different semantic chunks are ground up in our consciousness, and the result is a strange medley!

Satoru: (unimpressed) Hmm. I think Pythagoras was right in pointing out that silence is often better than words.

Melissa: (teasing Satoru) You're such a party pooper!

- T Newfields

Begun: 2001 in Nagoya, Japan * Finished: 2018 in Yokohama, Japan
Creative Commons License: Attribution. {{CC-BY-4.0}} Granted

